Design Statement:

The New Berlin Junior Woman's Club first approached the city with partnership interest in developing a destination splashpad. Their vision and dedicated efforts to fundraise are integral to the success of the project. Malone Park presently consists of 90 acres of multi-purpose recreational opportunities. The addition of a splashpad will become a natural extension of existing programming and enhance play opportunities for the community and broader region. The location and sizing of the 'play area', which encompasses the splash pad, restroom facility, and tot/child playgrounds, is situated in the same corner as the present day playground equipment. This enhanced play area allows for existing events and festivals to function in their current capacity, while increasing parking, creating a fenced buffer for safety, and announcing this corner of the park as an entry.

THEME

A design character was established for the 'play area' of Malone park through collaboration with the steering committee and community organizations. An abstracted take on three unique ecotypes of the region are the basis for the design which also correspond to age group separation. Vertical features throughout enhance imagination and overall aesthetic continuity. Area elements include:

"THE POND"

As the designated 'tot' area of the splash pad, this area includes lower flow features with an emphasis on the discovery of water play. The area consists of a blue colored surfacing material that is divided by a colored concrete sidewalk 'bridge' separating a shaded canopy area from the splash pad. Spray features will create unique play opportunities for the youngest of the splash pad users.

"THE MEADOW"

The largest area of the splash pad, the Meadow divides the tot area from the more action oriented section of the pad. A buff colored concrete surface is dotted with circles in hues related to the colorful plants of a meadow. As an abstraction, the circles provide defined areas for sprays and creative ground plane patterning that stimulate the minds of users. Vertical spray flowers throughout this area will appear to grow out of the pavement and allow children ample room to roam.

"THE FOREST"

The most active section of the splash pad in both terms of water flow and feature type, the Forest takes its inspiration from the woodlands of Malone Park. A first of its kind, spraying tree, will become the main attraction to inspire and awe with its look and volume of flow. The pavement pattern consists of a curving trunk walk with branches reaching through the canopy. Vertical features punctuate the canopy, while darker hued surfacing will help define the space. The Forest trunk continues in the form of a winding sidewalk that bisects the traditional dry playground equipment area. This zone contains a tot play space and an older child area featuring larger equipment. Themed features will take their aesthetic from natural elements like trees, rocks, and leaves.
